

Alexion Employees Volunteer Together in Company's First Global Day of Service

–More than 1,500 Alexion employees in 30 communities take part in community service projects focused on improving health, wellness, and education–

NEW HAVEN, Conn. – September 23, 2016 – Alexion Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (NASDAQ: ALXN) announced today that more than 1,500 employees around the world are volunteering in their respective communities as part of the Company's first Global Day of Service. For this inaugural event, Alexion employees are partnering with local non-profit organizations to participate in service projects focused on improving health, wellness, and education in 30 of the Company's local communities across North America, Europe, Latin America, Asia, and Australia.

"At Alexion, one of our core values is to change the world for patients suffering from devastating and rare diseases by discovering, developing, and delivering life-changing therapies," said David Hallal, Chief Executive Officer of Alexion. "Today's Global Day of Service demonstrates our values in action as we join together to have a lasting impact on the communities around the world where we live and work."

Alexion partnered with Points of Light, the largest organization in the world dedicated to volunteer service, to identify and help reach those most in need in the Company's local communities.

"Through our partnership with Alexion, we have helped identify needs in local communities and connected employees with organizations to tackle them," said Jonathas Barreto, Director, Global, Points of Light. "Alexion employees have taken on an impressive range of volunteer service projects around the world, clearly ready to demonstrate that individuals can make a meaningful difference on a wide range of social issues."
